Little problems can become big ones in a hurry. When we fix the little ones, it reduces the number of big problems we have to deal with and teaches children important lessons in solving their own problems.

- Participants will learn how to modify their environments to eliminate the stumbling blocks that contribute to problematic behavior.
- Participants will learn methods to build self-esteem while improving children's interactions with one another.
- Participants will learn easy-to-use solutions that they can use immediately in their program.

Sharon McDonald has been training teachers for more than 20 years throughout the United States on a variety of early childhood topics. Her training is based on her unique perspective from 28 years as an early-childhood teacher. Her practical ideas, down-to-earth approaches, and her enthusiastic presentation style will energize and delight you. You will be able put the ideas you learn to use right away in your own early childhood setting.
